57TH ANNUAL BALL 1979

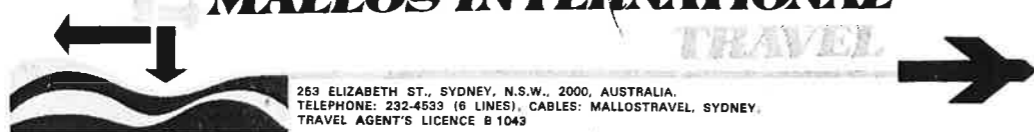

Kythera THE ISLAND OF LOVE

is a Greek island situated about 8 miles from Cape Malea, the southern promontory of Greece. From north to south it is nearly 20 miles long and its greatest breadth. In the church of St. Kosmas are preserved archaic Doric columns of the famous Temple of Venus. It was believed that it was upon this island that Venus emerged from the sea. Hence its popular name — the island of love. The island is rocky, but streams abound, and there are fertile districts. Two great caves, with stalactites, are among its natural peculiarities. Much land is pasture but wine, corn, olive oil and highly prized honey are produced for export. In mediaeval and modern history Kythera ranks as one of the Ionian Islands and shares their most colorful history.

PRESIDENT'S MESSAGE

On behalf of the members of the Committee and myself I take the honour and privilege to welcome you all here tonight, at our 57th Annual Ball. It is with sincere pleasure that I extend a very warm welcome to our Guest of Honour the Hon. Mr. R. J. Ellicott and Mrs. Ellicott and hope that they will have a most enjoyable evening with us, and may I add our great appreciation for your acceptance of our invitation to be our Guest of Honour. A sincere thank you and warm welcome to our Lady of Honour Mrs. Poppy Kepreotes, a big bouquet to the beautiful debutantes and their escorts, a hearty welcome to all our distinguished guests and last but not least a very warm welcome to you all and may you all have a very enjoyable evening.

I wish to take the opportunity and extend our appreciation to the people whose help have staged this Ball. It is only through personal involvement in the affairs of the Kytherian Brotherhood and the newly formed Kytherian Social Club that they will continue to prosper.

Sincerest regards
TERRY FATSEAS

HISTORY OF THE KYTHERIAN BROTHERHOOD OF AUSTRALIA

It has been fifty glorious years since our forefathers saw the need to unite the Kytherian Community into the bonds of an Association, which had as objectives, good fellowship, social and cultural activities among a group of people that have a lot in common, and helping the underprivileged by contributing to various charities, both in Australia and Greece.

Early in 1921, two prominent Kytherians in Sydney brought the idea forward. It was almost 12 months before the idea finally became reality, and on the 14th of May 1922 the inaugural meeting of the Kytherian Brotherhood took place at the "Marathon" cafe situated then at No. 72 Oxford St., Darlinghurst.

That night, the founders the late Cosmas Cassimatis and Theodore Crithary, called for a constitution to be drawn up and a date to be set for a general meeting and elections of a managing committee.

The elections were held on the 20th of August 1922, and the Foundation committee was elected to serve for the following 2 years. They were:

COSMAS CASSIMATIS — President
PETER MINOUKOS — Vice President
BILL FEROS — Secretary
NICK MARCELLOS — Treasurer.

THEO CRITHARY
CHARLES ANDRONICUS
JOHN PSALTIS

The activity and progress of the Kytherian Brotherhood has been outstanding. The far-sighted founders of the Brotherhood, could not have possibly foreseen that the little social group they started would have grown into one of the largest Associations. Over the years, donations of many thousands of dollars have been given to various charitable institutions and associations. The activities have reached far across the oceans to the island of Kythera, where the Brotherhood has made numerous contributions to various public works, hospitals, schools and general relief to the underprivileged.

During the Second World War, the Kytherian Brotherhood was instrumental in the organisation of a war-relief fund for Greece and a large sum of money was eventually remitted to Greece.

The Kytherians of today, enjoy a very high esteem both in the Greek and Australian communities. Because of the very early migration of Kytherians to Australia, the community consists mainly of Australian born people, well established in the business and professional world.

Reflecting back over the years, it becomes very clear that the Kytherians in Australia have been among the most progressive migrants, assimilating well into the Australian community, without neglecting to carry on some of the fine traditions of the old country.

OFF ROAD magazine readers vote...

DAIHATSU 4WD OF THE YEAR

Daihatsu Daddy Long Legs. Off Road Magazine's readers' choice as the best 4WD vehicle of 1977. Of the many thousands of Off Road readers who voted, an overwhelming 54.3 per cent put the Daihatsu 1600 F20 at the top of their list for off-roader of the year.

And apart from winning the 4WD of the Year award Daddy Long Legs also cleaned up in no less than 5 other categories including:

- ◆ Best Short Wheelbase
- ◆ Best Soft Top
- ◆ Best Four Cylinder
- ◆ Best Hard Top

Off Road said: "Nobody, not even us, could have anticipated the tremendous popularity of the 1600cc model. By comparison - the next most popular contender for the title received only 12.3 per cent of the vote."

The Daihatsu Daddy Long Legs offers a 1587cc motor, for more power on the road and off. Power boosted brakes. A full 8" ground clearance. And much, much more.

And that's only half the story. Because now there's a new F20 model: 'Super Daddy'. With wide wheels, wide dirt biting tyres, stereo cassette/radio, fully carpeted and luxury trimmed with reclining bucket seats and attention grabbing paintwork... Daddy Long Legs never looked better.

Angelo and John Notaras are the sons of Tony and Ianthe Notaras of Dover Heights (formerly Crafton, N.S.W.) Angelo and John were awarded the A.B.C. "T.V." Inventor of the Year for 1976 and as well have been awarded a number of Australian Industrial Design Awards.

Their business activities cover a number of fields but their greatest interest is in their manufacturing companies where they produce products which enjoy a unique place in the market due to their technical superiority and design. Their products are sold throughout Australia and they export to many countries around the world. They have visited Kythera on many occasions and believe their success is due to the fine example that the pioneers from Kythera set in establishing themselves in Australia.

Archivides Kalokerinos (known as "Archie")

Born 28-9-27 at Glen Innes, N.S.W.

Father, Nicholas Kalokerinos, deceased, from Alexandratis (?spelling) Kythera. Mother Mary Kalokerinos, living in Rose Bay from Potamos, Kythera.

Graduated M.B., B.S. University Sydney 1951. Spend 6 years in England after graduation then commenced practice at Collarenebri, N.S.W., in 1957. Living at Collarenebri was another Kytherian family (Emmanuel Petrohelos) which happened to be actual next-door neighbours to my father in Greece. Emmanuel became a friend - father relation and influenced, considerably, what was to happen.

The problem at Collarenebri was a shockingly high infant death rate. Most of the deaths occurred amongst the Aboriginal people but there were many amongst the white families. Attempts to solve the problem over an 8 year period failed and at that stage, disappointment and disillusioned, I forsake medicine for a new life at Coober Pedy, South Australia, as an opal miner.

Strangely, at the time, Australian opal poorly understood. I undertook an intensive study the amounted to extreme fascination and resulted in the taking of 60,000 colour slides of opal specimens and the publication of two books. It so happened that Coober Pedy was the home of many tribal Aborigines. Close contact with these people led me to further thinking about their health problems and in 1967 I returned to medical practice at Collarenebri with the intention of trying out some new ideas

Results of these ideas exceeded all hopes. From that date on not a single infant, black or white, died at Collarenebri from illness - a dramatic event, reasons for which have been hotly debated. Fundamentally, the study involved the use of vitamin C. The details are quite complex and have led to the use of this vitamin in a wide range of medical problems.

Cot deaths (or sudden, unexpected infant deaths) have been the main part of my work over the past 12 years. At the same time I have become deeply involved in Aboriginal affairs and, until recently, have been more than a little disappointed at the lack of interest demonstrated by Greek - Australians in this area.

Since 1975 I have been employed as medical officer at the Aboriginal Medical Service based at Redfern. But the work covers almost the whole of Australia. Apart from direct medical care welfare work in goals, children's homes and institutions has become important. There is special attention to alcoholism and drug related problems. Writing, lecturing to home and abroad takes up much of my time. Finally, attempts are being made to relate Aboriginal health problems with those of the white community and many countries overseas.

SKANDIA is the name of an ancient leading town in Kythera, the history of which goes back to the dawn of Greek civilisation. According to historians Thucydides and Pausanias, Skandia was situated on the present-day Kastri Promontory where, in 1932, Miss Benton of the British Archaeological School of Athens, discovered remnants of a Minoan housing settlement.

Two miles inland, on the mount Paleokastro, archaeologists had observed ruins of the Greek period, capitals of Doric columns among them, which were later used in the building of Saint Cosma's church. These column heads, dating back to the 6th century B.C., belonged probably to the more ancient temple of Aphrodite, whose worship, according to Herodotus, was introduced to the island by the Phoenicians.

Upon this mountain was the Upper Town of Ancient Kythera, which was destroyed by the Athenian General Nikias in 424 B.C., the island then being a Spartan colony.

Since 1963, successive excavations, conducted by a mixed mission of the Museum of Pennsylvania University and the British School of Athens, have unearthed much evidence strongly pointing to the belief that ancient Kythera had been a Cretan colony and the influence of Cretan civilisation at the time Crete reigned supreme as the leading naval power in the Mediterranean.

There have been discovered houses with small foundations and narrow doors resembling those of the later Minoan period (1400 B.C.), vases similar to those used in Crete about 2000 B.C. and other many-coloured vessels typical of that Cretan period and art, and strongly suggesting that it was mainly commerce that had induced the Cretans to settle on Kythera.

At that period Skandia and the town of Kythera were enjoying great economic prosperity, due mostly to profitable fishing of porphyry shells in the gulf of present-day Avlemon, and to the fact that the port of Skandia was a centre of commercial transportation between eastern and western Mediterranean.

This, of course, is only a synoptical history of ancient Skandia, and generally Kythera, the island which, according to archaeological, must have been the first Minoan colony beyond Cretan shores.
