

NIKOLAOS DAM. ANDRONIKOS

One of the monuments to Greek ability and progress abroad is the establishment, of three storeys, owned by Mr Nikolaos Andronikos (Andronicus), from Mylopotamos on Kythera. It was built by Mr Andronicus in 1912 in a central location in Sydney. Mr Andronicus, following the flow of migrants that holds sway in Greece, came to Australia in 1897. Completely unknown to all, he found work at the side of Greeks, deciding to work hard for his living and to overcome any obstacles that might crop up in his path.

In such a fashion, Mr Andronicus was very willing to engage in various business enterprises. Thanks to his love of hard work, his economies and to his activity, these businesses were built up to occupy a conspicuous position, a fact which led this well-liked Greek to the already splendid set of circumstances that he occupies, whereby he is to be classed among the successfully settled Greeks of Australia. In 1908, he married Miss Antigoni S. Fokas, with whom a year ago he had a baby boy, whom he adores.

Mr Andronicus, who happens to be the brother of the traders, the Andronicus brothers, whom we have referred to, is charming, hospitable, affable and is always willing to make concessions, even if it is not to his own advantage. His splendid establishment offers work, at any one time, to many fellow Greeks, and is to be numbered among the leading Greek shops of Australia.
